The Media Design Program (MDP) embraces the idea that the act of designing is a unique way of knowing about the world. As designers, we create objects and communications that inform, influence, and alter everyday life. In the process of making, we visualize, iterate, and critique, and we believe that it is through these activities that designers can gain unique insights and generate new ideas and artifacts.

In this spirit, Text Story was developed during the MDP's signature Super Studio course, a three-term exploration into design research, and evolved from a singular yet open-ended assignment: study families within the Pasadena area to understand how streaming, real-time media influences their behavior, vocabulary, social interactions, and perception of the world.

Past Super Studio Projects include:

Passing on the Future (2007)

Blux (2006)

MOBO (2005)

Fip It:180 (2004)

Backstory (2003)

Upshift (2002)

Text Story

A look at the Sundberg Family and the Media Design Program's Text Wall Project
March 27 to March 30, 2008.

Wall-e. For four days in March of 2008, Wall-e graced the Sundberg Wall and by now his exploits are legendary. Riding Space Mountain. Meeting Simon. Splashed by Shamu. Heartbreak and sunburn. And who can forget that ill-fated trip to the museum?

Text Story is a collection of text messages sent during this time. As designers, it was our intent to create a project that would contextualize streaming media as a media form that did not necessarily come from outside the home, but could be generated within it. We believe this book, created with you, serves as an example of the collaborative possibilities within design research.

Moreover, this book is a small way of thanking your family. Not only for welcoming us into your home, but the time and patience necessary to build a relationship of trust.

We hope you enjoy this book as much as we had in making it!

Luke and Julia

30-Mar 7:53:27 Memories of wall-e.. I remember the day we brought little wall-e home. He was a good baby. I don't think he cried once.

30-Mar 9:47:32 Wall-e, want to come to church with us? Oh sorry, they already have a projector.

30-Mar 11:28:22 I'm glad to be here with you, wall-e, here at the end of all things.

30-Mar 12:27:32 I remember when wall-e tried to join the little league baseball team. They didnt let him on, being that he couldn't hold the bat.

30-Mar 12:43:22 I remember the day wall-e came home with us. To think, now he's all grown up!
